THE BURTON CASE IS UP

HIS APPEAL BEING ARGUED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT.

7 LAWYERS RETAINED

Mr. Waggener Attacks Constitutionality of Act Under Which Senator Burton Was Convicted.

Washington, April 5.—The case of Senator J. R. Burton, of Kansas, an appeal from the sentence imposed by the United States circuit court at St. Louis, came up for argument in the supreme court of the United States this afternoon. By consent of the court, each side was given an additional hour, making four hours on each side.

The opening argument was delivered by Judge Dillon on behalf of Senator Burton. Judge Dillon spoke in a low voice that could hardly be heard back of the rail, but was listened to with close attention by the justices, and was adjudged by all who heard it as an able and exhaustive presentation of the case.

Judge Dillon was followed by Balie Waggener, who spoke rapidly and in a clear tone of voice on the constitutional question which is raised in his brief attacking the act of 1864. It was not decided whether Mr. Waggener would have an opportunity to address the court on this question until some of the justices expressed a wish to hear a short oral argument on the subject. Mr. Waggener was frequently interrupted by short queries from the members of the court and he delivered his argument with expressive vehemence, crowding as much of his argument into forty minutes allotted him as was possible.

All the visitors' seats were occupied, and although Senator Long was at the same time speaking in the senate, the members of the Kansas delegation kept dropping in and out throughout the afternoon.

Quite a number of prominent attorneys and members of the house and senate listened to the greater portion of the constitutional argument raised by Senator Burton's attorneys and expressed a keen interest in the contention that a lower court cannot rightfully deprive a senator of a seat in the senate without that body having declared the seat vacant.

The point which chiefly interested the members was the argument that, by analogy, congress might pass a law prohibiting the president from interfering with legislation, and a court might find him guilty and prevent him from exercising the duties of his office. Although the argument was purely technical, it was well delivered and apparently received with attention by the court. At one point Waggener cited an opinion of Justice Brewer while on the circuit bench in Kansas, which Justice Brewer examined with special interest.

Senator Burton occupied a rear seat within the railing, and was recognized by but few of the sightseers and visitors.

Representatives Curtis, Miller and others sat beside him at different times during the argument, but his attention was closely fixed on his attorney and the court, and beyond a civil greeting he had little to say to those near him.

Mr. Waggener was followed by Assistant United States Attorney General Robb, who had spoken but a short time when the court adjourned. He will continue tomorrow, and F. W. Lehmann will close the argument for Burton.

The government was represented by Assistant Attorney General Charles H. Fobb and Mr. Burton by a long array of counsel, consisting of ex-Judge John E. Dillon, Balie F. Waggener, Henry Hubbard, W. H. Rosington, W. Knox Haynes, F. W. Lehmann and W. P. Hackney.

The charge against Senator Burton in this case is the same as that preferred when the case was before the court last year, except in this case the receipt of money by Burton in St. Louis is alleged. The reversal of the decision of the circuit court on the former appeal was based upon the failure to show that fact. The testimony was then adduced only showing that he was paid for his services with checks that were cashed in this city.

The charge against Burton is that of violating section 1782 of the Revised Statutes, prohibiting senators and members of the house receiving compensation for services rendered in relation to any proceeding in which the United States is interested. Burton is charged with accepting a fee of $500 a month from the Rialto Grain & Securities company, of St. Louis, for representing that company before the postoffice department, in a proceeding charging that company with the fraudulent use of the mails.

The government urged that Mr. Burton had entered into the discharge of his services as counsel with full knowledge of the facts, while it was contended on behalf of Mr. Burton that he had not in the beginning been the representative of the Rialto company, but the personal attorney of Major Dennis, of that company, in the matter of a personal prosecution against him.

Mr. Burton's defense was summed up in the following language:

"We maintain first, that the present indictment does not state a case in which the United States is interested, within the meaning of section 1782 and second, even if interested, nevertheless, the proof shows that Burton neither agreed to render nor did render any services in respect of any matter in which in any view the United States had any interest, direct or indirect."

INSTRUCTION ON VIOLIN.

I wish to announce to those desirous of pursuing studies of the violin that I am prepared to give instructions. Careful studies of the violin and music have been pursued under such masters of the art as Emile Sauret, Bernhard Listemann, William Konrad, Felix Borowski and Dr. Louis Falk, at the Chicago Musical College, from which I graduated last spring. I have had seven years experience in teaching.

CALLED ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Men of Eminence Testify to the Worth of Buttermilk.

Assuming that you have forsown alcohol and have found nothing to replace the glass of beer, try buttermilk. In good condition, at its sourest, it is a genuinely refreshing, sharp drink—acid, but not thin like lemonade—nourishing, but not insipid like milk. It is a harmless substitute for intoxicants, a remedy for tuberculosis, and all pulmonary complaints, and beneficial to the digestion.

Russian Koumiss, nearly the same thing, is sour mare's milk, and it is well known that the tribes who drink it are immune from consumption. Koumiss has consequently been largely used as a cure for that disease. The famous Russian Count Tolstoy, who was at one time afflicted with tuberculosis, attributes his cure largely to the drinking of Koumiss in abundance while living in a tent on the Russian steppes.

A famous English physician, Sir Lauder Brunton, says of buttermilk that it "quenches the thirst, supplies food, and also contains a ferment which, if absorbed, may be useful in aiding the conversion of sugar into lactic acid within the body. I am inclined to attribute the benefits occasionally derived from the use of skimmed milk to its possessing similar properties to buttermilk. But I consider the latter superior. When it is allowed to become very sour, and all its milk sugar has been converted into lactic acid, it would probably be still better."

According to Professor Metchnikoff sour milk or buttermilk is a sort of elixir of life, in that it is a remedy for "the slow intoxications that weaken the resistance of the higher elements of the body."

Buttermilk is very easy of digestion and assimilation. In diabetes, where milk is more or less objectionable, buttermilk can be safely given with advantage. It is also given as a refrigerant.

Superfluities.

Many will soon be asking—and earnestly, too, some of us—whether we are not becoming less luxurious in habit than formerly. The trade in superfluities, unfortunately, is extremely lean.—Drapers' Record.

His Literary Preference.

It was a Chicago business man who in answer to the question, "What book has had the greatest influence on your life and been most beneficial to you?" sent the following reply: "Bradstreet's."

In an All-Tobacco Cigar.

This is the result of analysis of an all-tobacco cigar. An English parliamentary report showing adulteration of tobacco gives the following as ingredients in very cheap cigars: "Sugar, alum, flour or meal, rhubarb leaves, saltpeter, fuller's earth, starch, malt-comings, chromate of lead, peat moss, molasses, burdock leaves, common salt, endive leaves, lampblack, gum, red dye, a black dye composed of vegetable red, iron and licorice, scraps of newspaper, cinnamon stick, cabbage leaves and straw bross paper."
